Welborn Sullivan Meck & Tooley, P.C. Adds Two New Lawyers

DENVER (May 31, 2007)—Welborn Sullivan Meck & Tooley, P.C., a Denver-based law firm, has announced the addition of two new lawyers, Jeffrey J. Peterson and Jennifer L. McDowell.

Mr. Peterson advises businesses in a broad spectrum of areas, including corporate law, organizational and succession planning, mergers and acquisitions, financing, securities, tax and regulatory compliance. Prior to joining the firm, Mr. Peterson was a partner at Berenbaum, Weinsheink & Eason.

Before joining Welborn Sullivan Meck & Tooley, P.C., Ms. McDowell spent four years litigating state and local tax disputes primarily for oil, gas, natural resources and chemical companies in Colorado, Wyoming, and Louisiana. Ms. McDowell's practice areas include appellate practice, business tax planning, oil and gas law, and business law.

“We are very pleased to welcome these distinguished attorneys to the firm,” stated firm President John Meck. “Jennifer and Jeff will enhance client services and expand our capacity to serve our clients in business tax planning, mergers and acquisitions, and general corporate matters.”

Established in 1993 and located in Denver's financial district, Welborn Sullivan Meck & Tooley specializes in comprehensive legal services related to business transactions, corporate law and finance, natural resources, and litigation.
